

Chapter 122

Elizabeth was stunned, and she became furious at once!

What a shameless fella!

How dare he made a complain about her to the new director!

He had no sense of shame!

Just when she was about to lose her temper, she heard a voice from not far away. "Elizabeth, look at the time now! Why do you come so late? Who is this person?"

Elizabeth shifted her gaze in that direction as her heart skipped a beat!

The man was the vice director of Lunanica Media, Martin!

She was one of the men Elizabeth had hooked up with.

Behind Martin, there were at least seven executives of the company.

Elizabeth's heart stopped. She braced herself and said to Martin, who was walking over, "Director Zhang, he is one of my classmates, my obsessed fanboy. He stalked me all the way here."

Martin looked at William indifferently, then he said to Elizabeth displeasingly, "Elizabeth, you should get your priorities straight! Didn't I tell you who we are going to meet this morning?"

Elizabeth's face froze.

Although she had an affair with Martin, Martin always acted like a domineering director in public.

She muttered, "I do. I'm really sorry, Director Zhang. I'll drive him away now."

With this, she glared at William.

But William had no intention of leaving.

Elizabeth dared not to escalate her feud with William in front of Martin. She pondered about it for a moment before she suddenly winked at Martin.

Martin frowned, but he still followed Elizabeth to a corner where no one could see or hear them.

When Elizabeth saw that there was no one, she immediately took Martin's arm intimately and seduced him with her voluptuous bosoms.

She said grudgingly, "Director Zhang, that guy is a good-for-nothing. That guy has endless wishful thinking. This time, he came here with me trying to blackmail me..."

Martin was enjoying Elizabeth's intimate contact as he asked, "What is he trying to blackmail you with?"

Elizabeth chose not to answer directly but said, "I have a secret with a man..."

Sure enough, Director Zhang immediately misunderstood her. His brows became knitted instantly. "We were photographed by him? F*ck! Why didn't you tell me in advance about such a thing?"

Elizabeth threw him a frustrated glance. "I wanted to solve it myself, but he is a tough nut to crack."

"Very well. I know it now. You said that guy is jobless with no background, didn't you?" There was a hint of viciousness in Martin's eyes.

"Yes, I swear!" Elizabeth had witnessed how useless William was during the alumni meeting previously. In her opinion, William was just an unemployed kept man.

"Now that the new director is arriving soon, we can't draw too much attention. Come with me. I have an idea," Martin said.

When the two of them returned to the hall, they saw that William was still there, they immediately exchanged glances.

William looked at his watch and frowned.

According to the time that he had agreed with Harper, his personal secretary should have already arrived here at that moment.

"Hey, boy. I've gotten a gist of the situation. Now, I'll give you two options." Martin looked down at William, who was in sportswear, obviously not going to show William any respect.

"First, you make a wise choice to come here. We need an assistant photographer, and you're certainly the right person for it. I'll give you an internship opportunity with a monthly salary of 3,000 dollars."

Martin rubbed his hand and then stated, "The second choice, the dumb one. You probably know my status in this city, and you won't want me to make your life difficult here. Think wisely."

After hearing this, William could not help but chortle.

Alright, let's keep the threatening second choice aside first.

Martin was going to hire him as a photographer? And even so an assistant photographer? But as an intern?

A monthly salary of 3000 dollars?

This was amusing.

When Martin saw William giggle, his lips quirked upward slightly too.

To deal with William, a penniless young man who was only interested in money, all it took to make him succumb was money and a job.

"It only takes an entry-level job offer to make him feel like he was walking on air," Martin thought.

"Boy, do you know why I offer you this position?" Martin question.

Martin could not help but wonder, "Did he really think that I'm hiring him because of his talent?"

"I'm merely showing a beggar some mercy," Martin scoffed inwardly.

He glimpsed at William. He was planning to take William in to lecture him on some manners!

William must be out of his mind! How dare he take pictures of Elizabeth and Martin!"

"You should know that we produce, nurture, and collaborate with the brightest names and talents. Many could only dream of working here. It is your best chance to get in touch with various celebrities. It is a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity. That's all I have to say." Martin once again bragged about the beauties he worked alongside. In his opinion, all men are instinctively attracted to beautiful women.

He was mad lucky to work alongside those celebrities; he probably had done a great contribution to this world in his previous life to be awarded such a good life!

William was about to reply to him when a black Mercedes stopped at the company's gate.

All the executives became energetic instantly!

Martin instantly ignored William and ordered the security guard to keep an eye on him. Then, he strode toward the door with his staff.

That was Harper. That was his personal secretary's car.

Since Harper's secretary was here, it meant that the new director was also here!

"Please be attentive and polite! Remember to leave a good impression on the new director! As long as you flatter him, I promise that you will get a promotion and a raise!" Martin reminded the people around him as he walked.

He looked at Elizabeth and said, "Elizabeth, you should stand beside me later. Be sensible and act accordingly!"

Elizabeth immediately thanked Martin gratefully, "Thank you, Director Zhang! I will seize the opportunity!"

She was extremely thrilled!

She could feel a sense of pride overflowing in her!

Martin was showing favor to her in public.

Moreover, as long as Elizabeth left a good impression in front of the new director, she would be able to... He was a man after all...

"I'll win him over. No man can resist me!" Elizabeth muttered to herself.

Several people strode to the front of the Mercedes-Benz. A woman with a curvaceous figure in a business suit came out of the car.

This woman was Harper's personal secretary,

Janet Ching.

"Pleasure to meet you, Miss Ching!" Martin and the others bowed and greeted her.

Although Janet was only a secretary, she was an important person. She was always by Harper's side.

Therefore, Martin knew that they had to get on Janet's good side.

Janet nodded and asked, "Is the director here yet?"

Martin was dumbstruck.

He wanted to ask Janet the same question.

"Didn't the director come with you?" Martin asked.

Janet's brows furrowed instantly. By right, the director should have arrived.

What was wrong with Martin? Didn't he manage to meet the new director?

Where could this mysterious director be?

Janet couldn't help looking around.

In the end, she fixed her gaze on a person in the hall. Then, while everyone was still in disbelief and shock, she strode through the crowd and towards that person!

"Director Lu, nice to meet you!"