

My Dreamy Old Husband Chapter 767

Sophia initially attempted to address Carmen's father, but Cooper interrupted, "Darling, didn't you say that you wanted to watch the commotion? We are going to the hospital after that."

She then turned to the other direction and headed to Villa No. 6 to watch the buzz.

Upon looking at her back view, Michael noticed the scars on her hand that were hidden under her sleeve. His mind went blank as he immersed himself in great joy and sorrow. The leashes in his hands were released again, allowing the two large dogs to gladly run toward her. Even the dogs know that their mother has returned. Why didn't I realize it? What exactly has happened in the past three years?

"Uncle, uncle..." It was only when Stanley came over to give Michael a shake did the latter snap out of his reverie. He then realized that Sophia had gone to watch the show.

As a former actor, he was able to hide his emotions under the surface. Now that he had returned to his senses, he immediately uttered, "I'm fine."

As he looked at the figure standing among the crowd while watching the commotion, his world had turned upside down—deep within his heart.

"Stan, take Carmen home first."

Upon hearing Michael's words, Stanley took Carmen home with Sean before returning to watch the show.

Sophia, who was standing among the crowd and focusing on the buzz of the group of people, suddenly seemed to hear that someone was calling her. "Sophia—"

With that feeling in mind, she subconsciously turned, but nobody was calling her. Only Carmen's father was standing not far behind her.

In a state of puzzlement, she turned to continue watching the commotion.

What she did not notice was the trace of inconspicuous shiver lasting only for a split second that the man with white hair had at the moment she subconsciously looked behind.

Chica, have you returned? Why don't you recognize me? Why... didn't you come home?

After Stanley sent Carmen home, he even locked Judge inside so that she could play with him at home.

Upon seeing Michael standing among the crowd and spacing out, Stanley secretly pointed at the person next to Cooper before uttering, "Uncle, look over there—that person is called Lucile. She's Cooper's daughter and my aunt's younger sister. She does look like Sophia from behind! Uncle Cooper said that Lucile's face was injured, so she has undergone plastic surgery in Xavion Cosmetic Hospital and will have the bandage removed today."

Michael did not budge as he gazed intently at the figure.

The show among the crowd was nearing the climax.

Upon seeing Sam's appearance, the West and Edwards Families kneeled around him, as if they saw their savior.

"Master Sam, please save us! Our family is going to fall apart if you don't save us!" The words were from Victoria's father.

A lot of things happened in the minor Edwards Family in these two weeks. They went bankrupt, their debtors showed up at their doors, and they had a related department conducting investigations on them—the same of which had happened to the West Family. They could not leave, had their lives thrown into chaos, and were unable to die.

"9th Old Master, someone is targeting the Edwards Family. When they knew that I'm from the Edwards Family, they framed us and threw us in such a desperate situation. Their next target would definitely be the entire Edwards Family! Master Sam, you have to save us!"

Peter chimed in as well. "Master Sam, we are all relatives. You can't just let us die!"

Upon looking at Peter and Victoria's father on their knees, a stunning Victoria with tears streaming down her cheeks, and the cold, stoical Cooper standing amidst the crowd, Sam raised his brows as he announced in an indifferent tone, "This time, it isn't because the Edwards Family refuses to save all of you. It's because there's nothing we can do..."

The crowd whined and wailed when Sam refused to help them. It was not easy for the West Family to be able to live a good life, so they absolutely refused to return to the life of poverty. The same could be said of the Edwards Family.

Victoria suddenly saw Sophia watching the commotion among the crowd. As soon as Victoria recognized her, she abruptly stood up and dashed toward the latter while pointing at her in fury. "It's her! This is the ugly b*tch who landed us in this mess! Master Sam, it's her! She's the one who ruined the Edwards Family! Catch her! Catch her now!"

Sam's gaze landed on Cooper, who stood beside the girl wrapped in bandage, and finally understood why the latter took action against them. Serves them right!

Upon seeing that Sam was unfazed, Victoria dashed up to Sophia in grimace like a gust of wind, as if she wanted to destroy the other person's face.

An enraged Cooper was about to make a move when Sophia, who was beside him, suddenly uttered in a cold voice, "Dad, let me handle this matter myself."

Under his watch, she took two steps forward and confronted Victoria, who was charging at her. Before everyone could understand what was happening, two crisp clicks were heard before it was followed by Victoria's shriek that sounded more tragic than a pig in a slaughterhouse. "Ahhhhh—"

The screech lasted until she held her hand as she kneeled on the ground, screaming in a helpless yet terrifying manner, "My hand! It's broken!"

Sophia had broken Victoria's hand with only one move—an extremely skilled and professional technique.

Everyone looked at the lady with a cold expression and backed away in fear.

Michael, who squeezed into the crowd to watch the commotion, happened to witness her action and found it extremely familiar—it was the technique of the Phantom Wolf.

His eyes filled with horror as he recalled his sister, whom Phantom Wolf had trained into another person. My chica, what have you endured all these years?

Sophia's sharp, ruthless technique stunned Cooper as well, causing him to have a sudden realization that his daughter was not a defenceless little girl—she was under the care of Quinton, the Phantom Wolf, for three years!

When she regained consciousness, she had told Cooper, "I've killed many people in order to survive."

In order to survive, she escaped from the town in the desert in a car to seek help in big cities. During that period of time, everywhere in that place was in the midst of chaos. Once the war started, the world became an incredibly difficult place to live in since there were bandits everywhere taking advantage of the situation to commit crimes. It would not have been a smooth journey for her as a woman to drive and venture through many chaotic towns in her journey to an even more lawless city.

Countless people would have targeted her car, aiming for the last piece of fortune and food she had on her—or even targeting her body!

If Sophia did not have a method to protect herself, she would not have peacefully survived for the past three years. If it had not been because she contracted Virs-18, she would have boarded the warship that was evacuated from there and safely returned to Cethos.

Cooper did not dare to even think what she had endured in those three years!

At the same time, he felt content yet heartbroken to know that his daughter would be able to protect herself if he was no longer around one fine day.

Without even glancing at Victoria, who was crying on her knees, Sophia turned and smiled at him. "Dad, let's go."

Cooper had originally planned to leave, but when he saw a stout b*stard approaching the crowd before standing next to Sam to watch the scene, his usually indifferent eyes suddenly burst into flames at that moment. It's him—the person who raped Annabel!

It felt like a grim storm had suddenly appeared out of nowhere.
